position without the need for it and it appears that in trying to please all he succeeded in pleasing none. Dea-con Pratt, after the service, when he opposed Blaine and he doesn't say one word about that. I never heard of his interests in the south being given before as a reason for acting as he did in the campaign. He didn't touch the real point in this speech. It won't affect the manner of pew renting. Another prominent member said:

may rally to his support this year to get outsiders to come in and buy pews, but they can't be expected to keep the church up to the old stand-

BEECHER'S BLUNDER.

New York. Dec. 29 .- The Tribune says of the Plymouth church meeting yesterday. Few of the members remained to speak with Becober after the sermon. There seemed to be a gen a l feeling of dissatisfaction with wast be said. The Republicans who supported Blaine seemed to feel that enough had not been said and that while Beecher retracted one offensive imputation be had evaded the real point at issue. Those who sided with Beecher felt that he had placed him self and the church in a humiliating con Pratt, after the service, when asked what he thought of what Beecher said and if it would prove satisfactory, said: "I think not. The mugwumps tried to get up applause, but it was not general. The feeling against Beecher was largely because

"Beecher has never taken back his reflections on the chastity of the peo ple in this state, just as he retracted all his reflections on the chastity of the public school teachers of Brooklyn a few years ago. Then, as now, he felt the force of outraged public opinion; but it won't do; the barbed shaft has done its deadly work, and Beecher can't undo what he has done. He made the greatest mistake of his life in the late campaign, and he will always regret it. The church going down hill and he can't stop. The rentals will decline greatly, for those attend now will not want the pews and many others who can't afford to go elsewhere while paying for seats in Plymouth church will be free to take pews elsewhere when they have reached the end of the year. Beecher is only trying to pre-pare for the inevitable. His friends
